BEST COUNTRIES FOR LAUNCHING AN ICO/STO

Singapore is a very conducive place to hold an ICO. To launch an ICO in the Asian country, a startup must register as a foundation and comply with the necessary KYC and AML regulations after which it is free to hold its crowdsale.

If the token is not a security, the legal requirements are quite small. However, if a token is deemed a security, then it must adhere to the nation's security laws. Despite this, Singapore is still very popular with startups holding their ICOs because its rules are fair and do not stifle innovation.

Furthermore, tax in Singapore is a flat rate of 17 percent for corporates with no additional gains tax. Lastly, startups looking to set up a home base there will have access to a large pool of tech-savvy professionals familiar with blockchain technology. This negates the costs associated with moving talent from other countries.

Another important aspect to consider about the Asian country is its ease of doing business. Singapore is ranked highly on the list of countries operating at the cutting edge of technology thus all of the amenities available in the world's most developed nations are available in the country.

Additionally, the government has provided a number of programs designed to spur on innovation and further cement the country's spot in the list of innovative nations. Incubation programs, free consultancy services as well as management training are some of the government-funded programs available for startups looking to hold their ICO in Singapore.
